Are they equal to the task?

broke, and we might as well accept the fact. We have borrowed on tomorrow, there are no more tomorrows to look forward to."

Those words were included in an editorial last week focusing on the fiscal sis in Suffolk County. The same mes-sage was delivered by Suffolk County Executive Robert Gaffney in detailing his decision to declare a fiscal emer-gency in Suffolk County, and outlining the necessary cost containment mea-sures that would be necessary to deal with a county deficit now declared to be $90 million.

Those measures go deep and will be painful. But some are necessary. They include laying off 1,341 county employees, including 300 police officers; severe funding cuts for outside agencies; the elimination of the Cooperative Exten-sion and all cultural affairs funding; the closing of county parks after Labor Day with the exception of revenue-producing facilities. Gaffney also called for the

"The day of paying the Pied Piper on home heating fuel, and new and in-has come. Suffolk has lived in a fantasy creased fees for various county services, world we no longer can afford. We are closing the county infirmary, and elimination of school crossing guards. That's for starters, for even with such cuts the savings this year will only be about $15 million, $75 million short of the $90 million deficit figure which many feel will grow even higher. Predictably, Gaffney's message drew loud screams of protest from a host of groups, agencies, unions and from many of those who carry a large share of the guilt for the deficit situation we are now in-the county legislators. "It goes without saying that the problem we are currently facing did not come about in the past five months, it came about as a re-sult of the last four years...," Gaffney told the legislators. And he is absolutely correct.

If Gaffney had any political sense he would have taken the easy way out by telling the legislators, "you broke it, you 'Since he was not part of the inept fix it. county government that spent us into a tremendous deficit, he could have put the burden on the legislators who are elimination of the sales tax exemption largely responsible for the spending

We recently received a call from a these huge benefits are still young county employee criticizing a practice enough to re-establish new careers or allowed by the Suffolk County Police accept other forms of work. that he considered to be a rip-off of the tax paying public.

who are about to retire, work extensive and unusual amounts of overtime during the last year on the job. He gave an example of one officer who will retire this year who has already accumulated over $22,000 in overtime alone. He went on to state that a police officer's retirement benefit is based upon the salary earned in the last year of work, including overtime. Police can retire after 20 years at 50 percent of their salary. For each year they stay on the force over 20 years, the percentage is increased. The retirement amounts are not based upon the average salary over the lifetime of employment, but are now only based on the last year's salary. Re-tiring officers can increase their pension by as much as 50 percent according to our source. This pension is then paid each year until the officer dies. If an officer retires in his early 40s, actuary tables indicate he will live well into his early 70s.

This is a giveaway that must be brought under control. We understand it is not only the police that have negotiated this lucrative benefit, but it was brought to our attention that superintendents of schools have been known to receive large salary increases in their final year, very obviously to boost their retirement benefit. One superintendent was successful in giving up perks in exchange for having their value added to his salary, which then became about $150,000. Quite obviously that action had a very beneficial impact on his future retirement benefit. Many of those who retire with

It is this kind of nonsense that has gotten us into the fiscal crisis we are According to his allegations, police in. It must be stopped. No one wants to deny anyone a reasonable pension, but the kind of settlements that are brought about by padding the deck during the last year of employment is not fair to the taxpayer, nor is it affordable.

As we report elsewhere in today's issue, over 1,300 county employees face the prospect of being laid off. School districts are cutting programs and laying off staff. Should this be the case when there are those in the system who are abusing it?

There is something very pervasive and lacking of fairness in this whole system. We must clean it up now and put an end to these abuses.

And why not?

the only stand possible. perhaps And now, to hear some of those legislators take pot shots at Gaffney for trying to stem the flow of county dollars and put the county back on an even keel is disgusting.

Presiding Officer Donald Blydenburgh (R-Smithtown) earned a special award for political gall with his tirade against Gaffney. Blydenburgh moaned that Gaffney did nothing for the four-and-one-half months he has been in ofice, and complained his proposals were little more than rehashed versions of what had been expressed before. Blydenburgh is now into his role as presiding officer for the third year. He has surely been part of the past spending which brought us to this point. He was part of the one-shots in the past which brought an infusion of fast dollars to ease imme-diate pain, but added more to our debt load in increased interest that is bringing more problems today. He expected Gaffney to wipe out the sins of the past in four-and-one-half months, when he and the legislature he leads have done precious little to resolve the problem in past years? While Blydenburgh has, be-latedly, presented a deficit-reduction proposal of his own which is being considered by the legislature, only time and very careful scrutiny will determine the merits of his proposal.

The county's employee unions have also raised their voices in pain and condemnation. But it is these very same unions that have played the largest part in the county's financial dilemma. Back in the early 1980s, the county's CSEA (Civil Service Employees Association), now known as AME (Association of Municipal Employees), successfully negoti-ated a mind-boggling contract with a hefty salary increase, double step jumps which boosted the salary increases, and a number of increased benefits which add to the cost of government. Suffolk Life raised the warning flags back then and said that the contract would lead to the county going bank-rupt. We said that by 1987 the accumulated impact of that contract over the years would bankrupt the county. It has. We said then the increases would require layoffs in the future. That is now necessary. Cutbacks will be required. The union now faces this reality: make concessions or lose jobs. How many jobs, or how deep a salary reduction, depends on how many concessions are made. The PBA, which represents the po-

frenzy that broke the county's financial lice force, has also won contracts which back, and escaped the heat he is sure to have made their members the highest get. He didn't. He took a tough stand, paid force around with a greatly reduced work schedule. The PBA also faces reality: the loss of jobs, or concessions. Suffolk Life was lambasted by the CSEA when we voiced those concerns, a boycott was launched, other viciousness was hurled our way, just as it is going to was nuried our way, just as it is going to be launched against Gaffney. But we were right then, and Gaffney is right now. All the screams, viciousness and opposition in the world is not going to change one basic fact: the county is broke, the days of riches are over. The greed and hunger of the past has come greed and hunger of the past has come home to roost

Some legislators are expressing their opposition to layoffs, and some of the cuts that have been proposed. Yes, they are going to be painful. No one really wants to see anyone lose a job, or have a salary cut, or important services elimi-nated. But those who say "no" have a responsibility to come up with alterna-tives. They must provide the same dollar savings produced by any option they reject. They are going to have to make hard choices. They can no longer bask in the glow of saying "yes" to every spe-cial interest group request. Anyone can spend money. It takes talent, skill and intelligence to manage the affairs of the county, or a business, to keep it solvent. Are the nay-sayers equal to the task? We shall see!

Fairness must be applied. Cuts must be made from top to bottom. Gaffney must make cuts in his own staff, in the top level positions, put an end to pa-tronage hiring. And the legislators must also bite the bullet, feel the pain. They must combine offices if need be, elimi-nate staff, cut their budget, get rid of their successful their budget. their cars, put an end to every needless expense. Any proposals that hit the rank and file, without cutting deep into the legislative and administrative empires, is without merit. There can be no sacred cows or favorite empires. The county must change the way it has been operating, privatize where possible, go out to bid for specialized services, find the most economical way to serve the people.

The surprising public support being given to Ross Perot, running an independent effort to become a presidential candidate, has proven one important thing: the public has had its fill of politicians and their shenanigans. And they are angry enough to act. Gaffney has taken a tough stance, the legislators would be well advised to 4 follow. Do what has to be done. Do what is right for the taxpayers. And why not?

SUFFOLK

is still rural. It is still, for the most part, agriculture based. For generations this tie was celebrated with an annual country fair, a real fair that was based upon displaying the best of agricultural products grown in the region. A longtime Riverhead resident, who has been connected with the agricul-tural business all of his life, recently proposed to the Riverhead Town Board that a real country fair be held in this community. Bud Papish owns a 90-acre track north of Route 58 in the heart of track north of Route 58 in the heart of would not only be displays of vegeta-the farmland. He wishes to use this site bles and fruits, but emphasis could be should support as it would help extend our tourist season and attract thousands of visitors

A really old-fashioned country fair could give us a good opportunity to dis-play the varied produce and fruits grown in this region. Papish also proposed the return of horse racing to this area, a tradition of the country fair which was held in Riverhead right up to the outbreak of World War II. There this region.

If the fair is operated as Papish has proposed, it would be a glorious return to our roots rather than just another glorified flea market. Riverhead desperately needs a helping hand econom-ically. Exhibitions of this type, done ately needs a helping hand econom-ically. Exhibitions of this type, done well, could recreate a positive image for a community that has suffered more than its share of adverse publicity over the years. And why not?

They're playing games again!

education, garbage collection, energy, and taxes on all levels, has been amply reported. With these problems so prevalent, and with state mandates cited as a major source of our financial burden, it boggles our mind that anyone in state government would be trying to jam another mandate down throats of local taxpayers. But, Suffolk Life learned last week, that's exactly what's being done.

The Nassau-Suffolk School Boards Association issued a "Legislative Alert" giving notice of legislation filed by state Senator Caesar Trunzo of Brentwood which would mandate insurance benefits, health and others, for retirees and their dependents. The alert, sent to all board presidents and superintendents, stated: "This bill would have a significant economic impact to your annual budget. Please contact your senator immediately ex-

The seriousness of the current fis-cal crisis in Suffolk County, not just in county government but in the lives of those who must pay higher bills for taxes or reduce programs to children those who must pay higher bills for taxes or reduce programs to children those who must pay higher bills for taxes or reduce programs to children those who must pay higher bills for taxes or reduce programs to children those who must pay higher bills for taxes or reduce programs to children those who must pay higher bills for taxes or reduce programs to children those who must pay higher bills for taxes or reduce programs to children those been an additional about the cost" attitude reflected in those been an additional to be the cost the taxes or reduce programs to children those been an additional to be the cost the taxes or reduce programs to children the taxes or taxes or reduce programs to children taxes for the taxes or taxes or reduce programs to children taxes or taxe and potentially impact the local and state economy by increasing the un-employment rolls."

> This is not the first effort to have local taxpayers pick up the tab for the insurance costs of retired school dis-trict employees. Because other efforts have failed, NYSUT (New York State United Teachers), the large, influential, and dollar-contributing teachers' union, has made the passage of such legislation a top legislative priority this year.

> What boggles our mind is that a local legislator would carry the water for this effort at a time when the constituents in his own school district are facing a tremendous school financing problem without this added cost. Brentwood voters went to the polls recently and soundly rejected a proposed budget and propositions which 411 in taxes for the owner of a home with an average assessment of $40,000. The increased tax burden for tion. the budget alone, stripped of transportation, athletics and supplies, would have been $276. With the loss of some $2 million in state aid over the last two years, the last thing Brentwood taxpayers need, or taxpayers in any other area, for that matter, is another mandate that adds to the tax burden.

A memorandum on this bill notes: "Fiscal implications: None to the State of New York." And therein lies the problem. Anyone can give away the store if someone else is footing the bill. State officials have spent the state into a deficit situation and have tried to cover their financial ineptness by transferring financial burdens to other levels, governments and school districts. Even with the combined reducwould have authorized transportation, tion of state aid and revised fee

Trunzo's bill is a primary reason why the state is in its current deficit condi-

"After a lifetime of dedicated public service, retirees deserve the peace of mind that comes with knowing they shall be eligible for health insurance on the same terms and conditions offered to their active public employee counterparts," says the memorandum counterparts," says the memorandum accompanying Trunzo's legislation. If runzo really believes that, why doesn't he include the provision that the state will pick up the tab? And if NYSUT is so dedicated to the protection of its retired members, why doesn't that organization provide group insurance, and pick up the tab, for these folks? Why? Because it's much easier for them to force the issue and let someone else foot the bill. After a lifetime of paying the bills, shouldn't the dedicated taxpayers deserve the peace of mind of being able to afford to continue to live here? Many of these same taxpayers can't afford health insurance of their own. Will Trunzo, or NYSUT, pick up their tab?

Although the memorandum ini-tially states: "This bill would allow retirees of school districts, BOCES (Board of Cooperative Educational Services), VEEB's and Special Act School Districts to voluntarily sub-scribe to health insurance plans proby vided their former public employers at the same cost as is af-forded to active employees." A quick forded to active employees." A quick read would make one think: "Gee, that's not so bad, if the retired em-ployees 'voluntarily subscribe' and pick up their own cost." But down in the last paragraph comes the news that the employees the school district in the employers, the school districts alias the taxpayers, will ultimately pick up the costs for the retirees and their dependents.

Trunzo's legislation is a prime example of how the state's legislators make themselves heroes to the lobbying groups at the expense of the taxpayers. Extended benefits of this type should be part of the negotiation process. If the union wants this benefit for their retirees, they must give some-thing else up. Or better yet, as stated before, let the union pick up the tab as a reward for the dues paid through the years. Unless the state provides the dollars, their mandate should be ashcanned!

A message to state legislators: This is an election year. Taxpayers are angry, faced with mounting taxes and gry, faced with mounting taxes mice a loss of income in a very bad economic a loss of income in a very bad economic a loss of income in a very bad economic a loss of income in a very bad economic a loss of income in a very bad economic a loss of income in a very bad economic a loss of income in a very bad economic a loss of income in a very bad economic a loss of income in a very bad economic a loss of income in a very bad economic a loss of income in a very bad economic a loss of income in a very bad economic a loss of income in a very bad economic a loss of income in a very bad economic a loss of income in a very bad economic a loss of income in a very bad economic a loss of income in a very bad economic a loss of income in a very bad economic a very bad economic a loss of income in a very bad economic a loss of income in a very bad economic a very bad time. They are giving up on politicians and turning to others, Ross Perot is a prime example. While the lure of NY-SUT support, financial and otherwise, might be an inducement to support this legislation, legislators are going to have to make a choice: Will they do

Their answer, which will be re-sure, could well decide their political

And why not?

nying requirements that comes with the declaration of a fiscal emergency, which County Executive Robert Gaffney proclaimed recently, is the creation of a Financial Control Board to oversee the financial affairs of the county. The frustrations of the continuing county fiscal crisis, and the attitude of county officials in dealing with this problem, point out the dramatic need for such controls.

The county's deficit did not grow to $90 million overnight. While many factors have brought it about, some admittedly out of the control of county officials, the major contributing factor is the mind-set that caused administration and legislators to spend, spend, spend without concern for the future. Future fiscal impact has always taken a back seat in the approval of court complexes, employee contracts, and a host of other actions which just heaped cost upon cost on the taxpayers' backs

Even in their efforts to resolve a growing deficit their tendency is to worry about easing the pain of today with one-shot solutions, ignoring the increased interest costs which will add to the financial problems in the future. The refinancing schemes and the sell and then lease-back proposals for the Dennison Building serve little purpose other than cause an immediate influx of revenues to ease today's financial pain

There is a reluctance on the part of county officials to place the county's finances under a Financial Control Board. The latest scheme is to establish a Financial Advisory Board. The name tells the tale. Advise, but no more. We'll listen, and then do what we please. But we can't afford that impact on the water in any way. There anymore.

Reportedly, one of the accompa- Board, with the sharpest financial minds available, no politics please, should be established. They should be the overseers of the county budget. Any spending proposal should be passed through this board before funds are allocated. If funds aren't there, dump the proposal. Someone has to have a handle on what's happening.

All through the political cam-paigns of last year, legislators gave varying answers when it came to pinpointing the deficit we would face in 1992. Estimates ranged from "we're in great shape" to "we'll have a deficit of about $30 million." Still others didn't know, and apparently didn't care. "If there is one, we'll handle it ho then," was their view. Well, there is, of. and you aren't!

There comes a time--and that time has come in Suffolk County--when the realization has to hit home that those in charge of the finances are incapable of doing the job. The administration and legislators are stalled in reaching a concensus on how to deal with the problem. They met, met again, and met still one more time last week and got nowhere. Now they're scheduled to meet again today, and we expect more of the same.

It's time to throw in the towel, folks. Time to insist that a Financial Control Board be put into place to oversee the future financial fate of this county

That must be done now, before the hole being dug gets too deep to get out

And why not?

Words of doom

A new flap has developed over Ro- impact is involved? And what steps bins Island. A county team was sched- will be taken to preserve its "pristine" uled to visit the island last week to nature if purchased by the county? determine if limited cluster development might be feasible. Environmentalists, who are determined to settle for nothing but total preservation, immediately raised their voices in protest.

The environmentalists insist total preservation is necessary for the envi-ronmental preservation of the Peconic Bay Estuary. But they offer no con-crete evidence that limited devel-opment would damage the waters of the bay. They talk about preservation of the groundwater, but offer no evidence that limited development would are no concrete plans for the number The taxpayers would be better of homes that would be involved in served to take the financial authority limited development, so how can out of the hands of the current crop of there be any predictions of environ-politicians. A Financial Control mental doom unless it is known what

And at what cost?

These are very bad times. With the county facing a deficit of $90 million, and perhaps more, the dollars have to be spent wisely. If spent for what someone wants, there may be no dollars for what is really essential. The rhetoric must end, the facts must be presented. The claims of "environ-mental jewel," environmental necessity, or beneficial economic impact must be accompanied by facts, scientific support, if they are to be believed. Bogus claims to enhance selfish motives simply don't fly when people are losing jobs, services are being cut, and health clinics are being closed. People are important too!

And why not?

Change won't come unless you do it

Congress has never been so low in esteem as they are today. They had an opportunity to put a brake on themselves and redeem their images in the public's eye by enacting a balanced budget Constitutional amendment. But they didn't.

House, would have had to win Senate approval, approval by the President d be ratified by all 50 states. The quired the President to submit a balanced budget to Congress. The budget would have to remain balanced unless 60 percent of the members of the House and the Senate voted to exceed this limit. It also forbid the government to borrow more money to finance deficits without the approval of the required 60 percent of the Senate and the House. It would stop the government from overspending even if the elected officials do not have the ability or courage to do it themselves.

Congress turned down this opportunity to restore financial integrity to the United States. Suffolk's congressmen, George Hochbrueckner, Thomas Downey and Robert Mrazek, all re-fused to approve this brake on government spending. They want government to continue as is, growing, want wasting, festering and breeding rebellion.

Don't these men have any com-mon sense at all? Don't they under-stand the anger of their constituents over their check kiting and bounced checks and the other shenanigans, including raising their salaries in the dark of the night? Their constituents are angry not only about these personal abuses, but their votes on the many fiscal issues that have caused their taxes to skyrocket and forced them into subservient existences.

The public has had it with the re- that would go on through 1998. The bruecker and Mrazek, playing Gods, lentless spending of more than we process would have had to endure in- will take away our freedoms as Ameridebt. It's eating us alive. We're dying ing support for passage. and these three just fiddle away.

The amendment, if passed by the sure. They wouldn't even let it get off ment to balance its budget, the same the dime. The House's passage was way you must do every day to survive. iust the first step of a tenuous process Congressmen Downey, Hoch-

Our Congress, true to their own belief of self-fulfillment, have refused How dare they have the audacity to allow you, the voter, to make a ra-have. We can't stand any more federal credible debate and have overwhelm- can citizens. Mrazek, thankfully, will be leaving Congress. Are the other two the type of congressmen you want? Come November, think before you vote. It's time to rid Congress of the "self-gratifiers" and put into office public servants who will act on your behalf. And why not?

he amazing Perot support

During the past couple of weeks to use, the ballot box. They have said, and privilege to kite checks that bo-we have been traveling extensively. "If you don't like what I am doing, unce like rubber. Wherever we have gone the subject throw me out of office." The Ameri-has been the same, Perot. It is amaz- can public is about ready to give a thing in their power to discredit Perot. ing the support H. Ross Perot has generated across the land. We believe his and frustration. The polls are indicatsupport typifies the disgust the average citizen has with government in general.

We have watched our taxes skyrocket, our lives become over-regulated and our governments become insensitive to our voices, to our pleas or our outright demands for basic needs. We have watched our government become a self-serving waffling octopus. Public service was traded for career opportunities by our elected of-ficials. They seem to operate on the premise that we have an insatiable ability to fund every program that they can devise to buy votes. They feel that we have been beaten down to a point where we will accept anything and grovel at their feet. We won our freedom through a bloody revolution. Few of us have a stomach for another one.

We do have an alternative and one We do have an alternative and one telligence by declaring it was their decisions. that the politicians have often told us bank and their money, and their right And w vivid demonstration of their anger ing that if the election was held today, they would send George Bush to the unemployment line and Bill Clinton back under the sheets. They would elect H. Ross Perot because he can be decisive leader who has proven he is decisive administrator and a guy who understands the system and can make it work like a business for the American people.

The voters are looking with a totally jaundiced eye at Congress and state leaders. They are ready to throw the bums out in hopes of re-establishing a responsible government that does more than allow them to survive. We are fed up with our congressional leaders who have raised their salaries by one-third in a midnight raid on our pocketbooks. And defaulted on their lunch bills in the now-defunct, plush House dining room; written tons of bad checks and then insulted our in-

The liberal press is doing every-thing in their power to discredit Perot, yet the public is having no part of it. It's true we do not know his stand on many major issues, but we admire the fact that he will not allow himself to be bullied into making a snap judgment or statement that can come back to haunt him at a later date. We are sure that the voters will know where he stands, firmly, between now and November.

The Perot candidacy is an ideal opportunity for America to show that democracy still does work here in the United States. We can change our leadership, our government and the course of history. We do hope that Perot is on the ballot in all 50 states so that the people will have an opportunity to pass judgment, instead of the political structure or liberal press.

We have the opportunity to learn who the man is, what he stands for and be able to compare it against the offerings of the Republican and Democratic parties. Then it will be time for

11,000

And why not?

Packaging Waste Reduction Act

Cuomo proposal is too little, too late announced he has proposed legis-lation to reduce New York State's solid waste stream by eliminating excess packaging. The idea is good, the timing isn't.

landfill ban went into effect, before residents were hit with millions of dollars in additional taxes to support the construction of incinerators and recycling facilities. The lunacy of the timing is that not only did state legislation force towns into facilities they did not have the finances to build, but long after legislation which details quotas on how much municipalities must recycle by what year.

Governor Mario Cuomo recently nities to recycle at least 15 percent of labor to meet the state quotas, the doing nothing constructive. If they nounced he has proposed legistic their waste by September of this year, market will be flooded, the demand had, the 1996 deadline could have alson to reduce New York State's 25 percent by 1994 and 40 percent by will decrease further, and we could ready been in place, and the 2000 goal September 1, 1997.

Cuomo's proposed "Packaging Waste Reduction Act" would require The reduction in packaging should that packaging waste be reduced from have been initiated before the state's 1988 levels by 15 percent by January 1988 levels by 15 percent by January 1, 1996, and by 35 percent by January 1, 2000. The reductions would be in the weight of the packaging.

But then what? When recycling quotas are imposed and met, what happens to the recycled materials? Are there any regional markets established to handle the recycled material? No! Towns are, at this point in time, having problems finding a market for wind up landfilling or trucking this material. What then, Mr. Governor?

Oh! We know! Then the governor will come out with a proposal to create regional markets. After the problem is here. Not before, to prevent the problem from happening. Make sense? No! But that is the way of govproblem Make ernment here in New York State.

All during the controversy leading up to the actual closing of landfills, state officials, including Cuomo, criticized town officials for waiting so long before they began taking action to meet the requirements of the ban. the recycled materials they now have. All the while they were criticizing, The legislation requires commu- When more and more municipalities however, they were sitting there and ready been in place, and the 2000 goal for 35 percent reduction could have been a lot closer to reality.

It would be easy to say "better late than never," and be thankful that, at long last, something has been proposed. Except for the fact that taxpay-ers are "paying through the nose" for increased garbage disposal fees which continue to skyrocket each year. How much better could towns have planned, and what savings could have been realized if they were planning fa-PAGE 5 ABCDEFGH cilities for a reduced waste stream?

Too little, too late. And in the matter of recycled materials and regional markets, we're going down that road again. Don't they ever learn? And why not?

We are going bankrupt

A half-cent won't solve deficit

quested a sales tax increase last year news. Next year, it is projected we will out of money. It will not be able to ernment but, rather, from business, and the Suffolk County Legislature in- be an additional $118 million in debt. pay its bills, its salaries, its contracts banking and industries not associated creased Suffolk's sales tax by a half- A half-cent sales tax cannot make up or its obligations to people. Those who with government. Robert Gaffney is seeking approval to of what is actually needed.

For L.I. to survive

This year, County Executive this deficit. It will only raise a fraction do the same. Both men have claimed that without it, Suffolk will go bank-rupt. The sad truth is, even with it, we are going bankrupt. We have spent more money than that without it, Suffolk will go bank-rupt. The sad truth is, even with it, we are going bankrupt. We have spent more money than that we have had in the past. We are elected leaders are incapable of ma-naging their own fiscal house. An out-today. We grew a government we side, independent board must be Suffolk is almost $100 million in couldn't afford. The county executives established to control Suffolk's fi-debt. We are budgeted to spend $100 have not been able to control it and nances. We must have a fiscal control million more this year than we will the legislature has not had the will. By board with teeth that is managed by are politically posturing and pointing fingers are adding to the chaos.

It is very apparent that Suffolk's

Energy costs must drop saga came last week when the decom- rather than moving to other states," missioning process, recently approved by the Nuclear Regulatory Commis-sion (NRC), was launched. A special ceremony was held marking that long sought moment of time, and a sense of satisfaction undoubtedly filled those who had fought long and hard to end the facility's threat to the health and safety of Long Islanders.

The start of decommissioning is, to us, an end result to a seemingly never-ending fight against bureaucracy and the strength of a powerful lobby, the nuclear industry. But although Shoreham will no longer threaten our area with the potential of a nuclear disaster, it did not leave us without a mark. The financial impact it has left on this area--the highest electrical rates in the nation-is staggering. These rates not only impact on our household budgets, they have esca-lated the costs of governments, and of operating our scheele and the operating our schools and businesses. We feel the brunt of this in increased taxes and prices.

Businesses are leaving Long Island because of the high cost of doing business here. A major ingredient in that cost is the high price of energy. And, although there are efforts by a consor-tium put together by the Long Island Association (LIA) to "sell" Long Is-land as a lure to get businesses to thority electricity supplied under this cost is the high price of energy. And, come or expand here, and programs economic growth, one of the causes of on Long Island.' the economic hurt remains. The cost of energy has soared, and will go higher in years to come as a result of the deal reached between Governor Mario Cuomo and the Long Island Lighting Company (LILCO) to end the Shoreham threat.

agreement that would ease this problem for two firms. "Economical elec-tricity from the New York Power Authority could mean that 287 jobs land. We have great beaches, mu-

The ultimate end to the Shoreham will stay or be added on Long Island, seums, and a sizable, talented work the NYPA announcement said. These allocations of low-cost power, NYPA Chairman Richard M. Flynn said, would commit Southside Laundry to maintain 215 jobs in Hempstead, and Burton Industries to keep its 31 jobs in North Babylon. And, he added, Southside would proceed with a $1.6 million expansion that will require 41 new jobs.

> The 1,300 kilowatts of power for the two firms, estimated to save them $50,000 annually in electricity costs, will be delivered by LILCO.

> Interestingly, although not an-nounced by NYPA, Newsday has also become the recipient of an allocation of the cheaper power, 2,000 kilowatts worth. That news comes via a trade publication, "Editor and Publisher," rather than NYPA. We can only wonder why. It's ironic that Newsday, whose fervent support for LILCO and Shoreham which helped drive the rates skyward, now escapes the end result of their damaging efforts. Their low-cost power gift was in return for assurances it will "preserve jobs," al-though a recent report indicated they had cut 300.

and other programs has helped to creinitiated by legislators to help foster ate or protect more than 26,000 jobs

If those figures are correct, how many more jobs could have been saved from leaving Long Island had more power been made available to more firms? Had the state's Public Service Commission (PSC) served the people rather than placate every re-quest for higher rates and Shoreham as a means of luring and keeping busi-Interestingly, the New York Power Authority (LIPA), just days before the Shoreham finale, announced an And the spiraling impact would not And, the spiraling impact would not have so disasterously injured our area. There's a lot to sell about Long Is-force. In short, with all these attrib-utes, we have a great place to live, if you can afford it. We also have the energy cost problem, the skyrocketing tax crisis, and an increase in crime while governments cut back on police protection.

Years back, Suffolk County cre-ated a "paper agency" designed to be the provider of low-cost power secured from upstate sources. But that agency, and any effort by the county to provide low-cost power fell through the cracks. Since the county has shown a lack of interest in helping ease the power costs, the Long Island Power Authority, which now has ownership of Shoreham and is in charge of decommissioning efforts, should be the agency through which this low-cost power should flow. Rather than abolish LIPA, as Newsday urges, it should be strengthened. Public elections should be held to take LIPA out of the hands of the governor and into the control of the people. We need a strong voice to control our future energy needs, we need protection against the PSC and the utilities it favors. LIPA could, and should, be that protection, if given a chance to operate as it was created to perform. Instead it has become a tool of the governor, who stacked the deck with his own people, and has, by controlling its leadership, manipulated its efforts. For the benefit of Long Island, that must change.

In reporting the power allocations last week, Flynn noted, "...these companies recognize our power can provide the competitive edge that will enable them to stay ... and grow ... on Long Island.

Utilizing that "competitive edge" ness here by bringing in more low-cost power will do far more good than "selling" the virtues of our area. We need to cure our problems, not gloss over them with rhetoric.

And why not?

County Executive Halpin re- take in. That's only one-half the bad October of this year, Suffolk will be people who do not come from the gov-

The people of Suffolk County cannot afford to continue living here, the burden of taxation has outstripped their ability to earn. Each day, more "For Sale" signs go up, good, loyal residents attempting to sell their homes not because they want to, but because they have to. For years, we have felt that we were "tilting at windmills" as we warned in editorial after editorial that the actions of all forms of government, from school boards through the county, cumulatively were breaking the backs of the taxpayers. Instead of heeding these warnings and prudently preparing its budgets, all government entities have put on the dog and pony show, trotted out every special interest group to justify spending, or allowed themselves to be used, thereby increasing the burden on the residents.

Last fall, when the county stood on the brink of bankruptcy and its bond rating was in serious jeopardy, the legislators approved the sales tax increase declaring they had no other choice, they really didn't want to do it, but it was the only way to save the county. And, many added, they would never go that route again. But they are.

A sales tax increase is counter-productive. It is ridiculous for consumers, who are desperately trying to survive, to have to pay an additional 8.5 percent more for their necessities, as well as the luxuries, than the retailers are charging. To avoid this burden many consumers have turned to mail order where they can buy everything from clothing to furniture, out of state, free of New York and Suffolk's oppressive sales tax. When these purchases are made, they strip the vitality of Suffolk's economy. Lost are the jobs associated with these purchases. Lost are the profits by local businesses that reinvest in the community. And, tax S revenues are lost.

Sales taxes must not be raised. K Real estate taxes can't be raised. What is left of our economy will be decimated as more citizens and businesses leave Long Island, fleeing to tax-affordable locations and leaving behind a further weakened economy that can't support the size and the scope of government. This must be brought to an end.

Suffolk only has two choices: an independent fiscal control board that has the power to control all expenditures, or a court-appointed control board that will be the result of a bankruptcy in October. Elected officials are out of choices. The day of reckoning is now

PAGE 5 ABCUEFUN

And why not?